The Queer Scheme. Modern Brags Arrives From Samoa.

Another Account of the Late Disturbance on the Islands.

SPECIAL STORY.

SAN FRANCISCO, February 16. The steamship Mariposa from Auckland and the Samoan Islands arrived this morning. Among the passengers was John C. Klein the American newspaper correspondent who has figured in the Bismarck-Cleveland row having led the natives to their recent battle with the Germans on the island but who claims to have witnessed the fight as a non-combatant in his capacity as a correspondent. When martial law was declared on the islands by the Germans the attempt was made by the latter to seize Klein but he was rescued by Americans and took passage on the Oceanic steamer Mariposa. When the Mariposa left the Samoan Islands were still under martial law and German aggression had become very marked and is claimed to have been directed against Americans as well as the natives.

The Mariposa left the Samoan Islands February 1. On that date none of the American men of war ordered to go to the islands had arrived and the Germans in operation of martial law were in complete control of the island, and had commenced to search all vessels in Samoan waters. But after seizing an English tourist named Gillin on the steam packet Richmond, Captain Hand of the English war ship Royalist ordered he man released, and prepared for a fight. The Germans released Gillin on his demand. The goods which arrived on the Richmond for American merchants at Apia the Germans would not land or trade to be landed, unless taken to a German storehouse and passed upon by the German officials.

The Samoan Times was suppressed on January 19 for stating that but for the loyal support of Tamasese all the natives would join Mataafa, and that Miss Bierbeck was deceived he would not attempt to force an unpopular rule on the country. Prior to the suppression of the Times Cusack, the editor, was fined $100 for reprinting certain American newspaper comments on the Samoan situation. Captain Fritz, the German consul-general, on January 23rd issued an order instructing all residents to leave all the rules of annexation hoisted and proclaimed the right of search by the captain of the American man of war. Klein protested against this action. The German troops acting under orders from Apia attempted to arrest Klein. On the afternoon of January 24th a party of the United States marines under Lieutenant Hamilton was surrounded by a force of Germans and was ordered by an officer to leave the German shop. All order while in the neutral waters of Apia harbor. The boat was afterwards released and when an explanation was demanded by Consul Cracklock Consul Knappe replied that the boat had been seized because it had not displayed the American national ensign and that the officer who had gone alongside of the Richmond to obtain freight was fired by a German guard boat. When the outrage was reported to Vice Consul Blacklock he at once communicated with Captain Mullen who wrote to Captain Fritz of the Adler demanding an explanation of the outrage and asking that the boat be at once released. The German captain replied that Germany had declared war against Samoa and that the boat was seized because Moore refused to load his goods at the German wharf. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the German captain gave his consent to the boat being released and allowed Moore to land a few head of cattle and sheep at his own wharf, but insisted that all other than live freight be landed at the wharf of the German firm.

Numerous other German outrages are reported in the advices brought by the Mariposa. In an interview to night Klein denies that he was other than a passive spectator of the battle between the Germans and natives and says that the attempt of the Germans to arrest him is due to their hatred of any one daring to state the real facts regarding their wickedness. This was illustrated in the case of Editor Cusack.

McAuliffe Anxious to Fight.

CHICAGO, February 16.—A dispatch from Milwaukee says that McAuliffe's deposits of having another fight with Myers in San Francisco under the auspices of the California Athletic club. If that information will put up a purse they will fight for the stakes now up and the purse also for. That will make a nice little stake. McAuliffe says in the mean time he will post $2,500 with the Chicago Athletic club, $2,500 with the Chicago Athletic club, $2,500 with the Chicago Athletic club,

WOMEN'S TEMPERS.

Mrs Leche Describes the Effect of Sweet Dispositions on Men.

Men who Expect to Give Nothing in Return for the Precious Gift.

The Difference Between Wholesome Effervescence and Souring.

(Copyright, 1889, by Cora B. Bliss.)

What a curse some people are to labor under who, when they are cross, or provoked to anger or impatience, lose their head, for the moment, and say or do what they would not for the world have said or done when they are themselves again. Every one has some one form of another. "Certainly. That is precisely the case with my husband," you exclaim. "He makes himself a perfect brute, both in word and deed, when he is angry, and I never can like him again, no matter how much he begs my pardon afterward." Yes, my dear, I know all about it, for I have had to do with just such a temper myself, and I have had to learn to control it, or else lose my husband's love and respect. I have had to learn that a hasty word, a hasty blow, or a hasty act, can never be recalled, and that no matter how much we may be sorry for it afterward, the effect of it will remain with the one who has been injured, and will be a barrier between us, which, if it does not separate us entirely, will prevent us from ever being as happy together as we were before.

Yes, my young friend, when you marry, by all means get a sweet-tempered woman for your wife, that is to say, if you can find her and she will accept you. But having found your sweet wife—and I assure you the bird does exist, for I have seen it—pause, before inviting it into your cage, to question with yourself what inducements you have to offer, and what qualities you feel yourself possessed of that will make the bargain an even one and render you worthy to possess a heart's best, best gift to man.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER

How Butchers Keep Track of Their Bills.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—It is frequently observable that men looking for fights have little difficulty in obtaining one, and even are oftentimes cruelly cuffed up by the police and "pinched" before the latter has been gratified, simply because of their lack of knowledge where and how to get what they want. To such ill-fated persons it may be a great boon to know that they can get a fight in West Washington market rather quicker than "at the sign of the bull," who never is drawn at, and all they have to do is to bang the skewers in two or three hundred sides of beef. These, upon proceedings, which will cause quite naturally, will be freely enough to interest any reasonable person trying the experiment. Changing the subject, and also at the same time taking a leap of two years and making a trifle in a man's life, in fact, that is what it really is.

The president has sent to the senate for confirmation the nomination of General Adlai Stevenson to be justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia. If the question of confirming the nomination depended upon the character, ability and popularity of the nominee, it is probable that General Stevenson would be transferred from the post office department to the bench at once.

In January, last there were 26,650 men out in seven-two strikes. In January, 1885 40,486 out in forty-eight strikes. Last month there were 16,926 out in seventy-one strikes. Of these, seven thousand were in the car strikes. The other seventy strikes were of comparatively little importance. This is a very good index of the generally prosperous condition of our laboring people.

The victory of the liberals over the Mormons in the late municipal election in Ogden is an achievement in which that city and not it alone but the whole territory of Utah is to be congratulated. It is a break in the chain of Mormon rule, and will serve to hasten the day when the reign of the saints will be a thing of the past. The fight was a closely contested one but the liberals, tired of the burden of oppression, were thoroughly aroused and the victory was complete.

Le Caron's record is coming out by degrees. It is shown that in the army he refused to fight at the battle of Murfreesboro, and stands in the official records as a coward. In 1885, he appeared at Chattanooga, where he was a fakir, and swindled a threshing machine company out of three thousand dollars. As to his testimony, it "cuts to have been inaccurate in most every particular." Le Caron, however, is highly admired for his magnificent range of subjects as well as for his magnificent lying. Full as much testimony could be taken in this country in rebuttal of his testimony as the commission has taken during its whole session.

There are a good many unfavorable comments on the removal of Consul Sewall. The favorite way of stating it in most of the republican papers and many of the democratic papers, like the New York Sun, is "Consul Sewall removed for standing up for his country against Germany." Those who say this, reflect greatly on their own intelligence. In the first place, it is evident that Mr. Bayard stood up for the rights of this country as against Germany, on account of the many pacific communications received from the German foreign office at Berlin. Count Herbert Bismarck states that it is not, and will not be the intention of the German government to annex Samoa, and he has directed the German consul at Samoa to cease those acts which have been offensive to our government. So far, our government rather out very well in the diplomatic contest. Sewall was removed very properly for talking too much. It is a wonder that he was not removed earlier.

The current number of Scribner's Magazine contains a very interesting paper by Mr Frederick H Chapin of Hartford Conn, entitled "Photographing the Big Horn." Mr Chapin, who is a member of the Appalachian club and a frequent contributor to Appalachia is pleasantly known in Colorado Springs, having spent portions of the past three years in this city. From this point he made numerous excursions into the mountains, photographing much of the game, and bringing reports of a band of unexpended rifle shots. The amount of his persistent exhibition has been quite startling, and that of the fur he has cursed by the quantities of which he was the head at times. I can vouch for the truth of his statement that Mr Winsenbaker's entire personal contribution to the exhibition was his saying that if the money he was instrumental in raising was spent, I cannot promise to be present at which he will not be a special exhibit, because inherently larger and braver of men who in order to get the money gave much more liberally to the subject. It is to the democratic party than Mr. Winsenbaker did in the republican. I myself contributed greatly to having exceedingly a time as to justify less than fifty to aid in the production of Mr Chapin's fine paper. What I say of Mr. Winsenbaker applies to Lieutenant Harrison and all the others who have been so kind as to help me in my work. Lieutenant Harrison and General Harrison's family have been kindness and civility personified to me, and I have been treated with equal courtesy by the rest of the officers of the post.

Harper's Weekly published a few days ago a letter from a democratic friend to Mr John Wanamaker, who gave expression to some rather significant views regarding the appointment of Mr Wanamaker to President Harrison's cabinet. The name of the writer is not given, nor is it to be guessed that Harper's Weekly, which has taken the opposite side of this question, would not have published this letter unless it had been written by some responsible party. From this it appears that John Wanamaker's contribution was no greater than that of President Cleveland. We publish the following extracts from the letter on this subject.

"While the suggestion may be made to assume the duties of what ever administration political President Harrison may invite him to accept, it has been a puzzle to the apparent to his friends, that he never very large sum, towards defraying the enormous expenses of his party and by himself personally, of unexpended character. The amount of his persistent contribution has been quite startling, and that of the fund contributed by the committee of which he was the head at times. I can vouch for the truth of his statement that Mr Wanamaker's entire personal contribution to the exhibition was his saying that if the money he was instrumental in raising was spent, I cannot promise to be present at which he will not be a special exhibit, because inherently larger and braver of men who in order to get the money gave much more liberally to the subject. It is to the democratic party than Mr. Winsenbaker did in the republican. CONTINUED FROM FIRST PAGE last ten days to the amount of over $40,000 principally in Boulder Heights property.

The GAZETTE's announcement of the purchase of Dickey and Stokes interest in Boulder Heights by Denver men and the progress of the Suburban Road are causing considerable speculation and talk in the city during the week. While a Stokes sale will probably close an other block of the lots on the market this week.

An enterprising citizen proposes to the Council of the city to put up a lamp at the corner of the Nevada Avenue and Cache La Poudre road, and to keep it lighted every night for a year, for $100. The proposition will be considered by the Council at its next meeting.

The Rock Island people are pushing their building to about three stories and not later than the middle of March. The plastering is now being put on and the first coat of paint.

Sperry & Tuckerman have the contract for a nest story and a half cottage for Elbert E. Martin to be built on the lot just south of the Presbyterian church. The plans are by Pease & Barber and the cost will be $2000.

Estcourt & Giltinan are building an $18 00 cottage for Thomas Barber on East Kiowa street. The firm has a contract to erect a six room house for H Benjamin on East Huerfano street, and a seven room house on North Walsatch avenue for F. D. Pastorious, to cost $2000.

Just how soon work will be begun upon the National Bank block cannot be stated but the plans and specifications are all out. Mr. W. P. Anderson is now in Kansas City in consultation with the architects. Nearly all the business firms have vacated and the old building has begun to have a deserted look. The bank will be moved on the 22d, which is a holiday.

The Totman Patent Hoe company is meeting with great success and a member of the company stated the other day that if they build fifty per cent of the hoes they have estimates on he would be satisfied. They are now figuring on 150 of the hoes to be built in Denver and already have $10,000 worth of work in Pueblo. They also expect to build 20 houses in Palmer Lake, and perhaps make an addition to the hotel.

Gen. Sherman Dead.

DENVER, February 16.—It is now known positively that the nominations sent to the senate on Friday by Governor Cooper are as follows: Joseph Lamping of Leadville, warden of the penitentiary; Samuel D Barnes of Denver, police magistrate, Edgar T Ensign of Colorado Springs, reappointed forest commissioner, Captain Kennedy of Buena Vista, fish commissioner, Benjamin F. Rice of Pueblo, adjutant general.

Will Go to Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, February 16.—The talk of the town to day has been the visit of Windom to Gen'l Harrison. The ex-secretary, who came by the request of the general, arrived at 11 o'clock this morning and drove immediately to the Harrison residence where he remained until 5 o'clock when he started on his return to the east. To those who sought an interview with him he was pleasant but gave no information in any direction. It is regarded that the cabinet is now practically decided upon and it will contain the names of Blaine, Windom, Rusk, Thomas Noble, Warner Miller and Wanamaker.

Windom Interviewed.

NEW YORK, February 16.—The Commercial Advertiser says that in an interview with ex-Senator Windom of Minnesota, he said, "I cannot deny or affirm that I'm going into General Harrison's cabinet, but when I return to New York the cabinet slate will have been made out completely."

"Does that mean that when another secretary of the treasury is selected the rest of the cabinet will fall into line without any friction?"

"That is just the amount of it, but you must not understand me to say that I am the man who will clear up the cabinet situation." Windom smiled as he made these remarks.

Has Disappeared.

CHICAGO, February 16.—Cecelia Miller, daughter of G S C Miller, a wealthy ranchman of Prescott, Ariz., who has been visiting her aunt Mrs S W Riley of Normal Park, disappeared last Sunday and has not been seen since. Her friends are much distressed but inclined to believe that she has returned to her western home as she was very homesick.

The judges of the court of appeals in Dublin have refused to grant an order of appeal to William O'Brien against his recent sentence to four months imprisonment for offenses under the crimes act.

BUILDING MATTERS.

The GAZETTE's New Years edition showed that during the year 1888 there was nearly $700,000 worth of building done in this city that could be accounted for. It is not a wild estimate to say that when the present year's work comes to be footed up it will show over a million dollars worth of work has been done. There is at present nearly as much work in sight in large buildings as was done last year. At present building is not as active as it has been for some time. But building during the month of February is usually slow in Colorado, as it is apt to be the most disagreeable month in the year, but still there is enough activity that if it occurred in an eastern town, its citizens would think the biggest kind of a boom had struck them. A prominent contractor remarked on Friday that the next thirty days would develop a wonderful amount of building. The year will be remarkable for the number of business blocks erected, and churches and other public buildings will be numerous.

THE O'BRIEN BLOCK.

Work on the O'Brien block on Tejon street will probably be commenced this week. Mr. Eugene Roberts has the contract for the excavations. The front of the building now occupied by W. S Nichols' grocery store is to be taken out and a new one put in to correspond with the O'Brien front, making the new block really three frontage of 50 feet. The new building is to be two stories high and will be 125 feet deep. A common stairway for the two buildings will be used. The plans are by an architect from Pueblo named Price, and they are said to be very handsome and when completed the block will be one of the most imposing in the city.

WORKING HARD.

The Western Building and Supply company is among the first in the matter of contracts for 1889, having already signed for $30,000 worth of buildings as follows: Residence, W. A. Otis, Austin Bluff $20,000, stable for the Austin Bluff company, $4,000, residence, Frank T. Lent, Austin Bluff, $6,500; school house, Roswell, $6,000, residence, H. L. Reed, Columbia street, $1,500. Mr Joseph Dozier, the superintendent of construction for the company, is kept very busy in gathering together materials and making preparations for handling the large amount of work which the company will do during the year. Mr Lent, the architect of the company, assisted by Messrs. Douglas, Russell and Godfard, is kept hustling by the large amount of work which is being turned out from the draughting room. Plans and specifications for work to the amount of $75,000 have been completed and accepted and besides this, preliminary drawings for $50,000 worth of work have been made. This includes, besides the drawings for the above contract work which were made by the company, a residence for F. H. Russell, Falcon, $1500, residence for L. W. Popejoy, $1600, station for the Denver Electric Illuminating company, $12,000, store for E. F. McCluskey, $3500, stable for H. L. Goddard, $3000, residence for Frederick Lockwood $2200; three stores for J. Arthur Council, Colorado City, $3500, residence for Mrs. E. C. Smith, North Tejon street, $2500, residence for J. S. Lacost $3000, residence for Sheffield Phipps, $4000. The designers are at present engaged on plans and specifications for residences at Austin's Bluff for T. G. Waterman, $30,000, and H. S. Woodruff, $7500. The company expects to get into its new building by the first of the month, when it will be obliged to put on more draughtsmen.

BUILDING NOTES.

Contractor R. W. Anderson has a $3000 cottage for Mrs Hastings well under way on North Tejon street.

The new Robertson buildings on the corner of Huerfano street and Cascade avenue are assuming shape.

Thomas Tribe's new $3000 residence which W. S. Stratton is building on Boulder Crescent is inclosed.

Eight new houses and all of them of a first class are to be built in West Colorado Springs during the spring.

Wight & West are to build an addition to the residence of Dr Hale on North Tejon street near the Cumberland Presbyterian church.

Estimates have been given for a three story brick business block to be built in Colorado City. It is to be 75x60 feet. The cost is not stated.

Contractor F. E Roby is just about completing his work at Roswell. Since the middle of October he has built twenty seven houses in Roswell.

Pease & Barber's plans for the new dormitory at the college were accepted last week, and they are now at work getting out specifications for the building. The cost will be about $20,000 and the work will be completed before commencement next June.

Contractor Bogue is building a seven room house for Mr George Dimon on East Kiowa street and intends to put on a Nevada avenue of four rooms.

Dr. Bell has purchased a lot on the corner of Nevada avenue and Huerfano street. It will be of frame and have a cottage capacity of about ten.

The Rock Island people are erecting another brick building to about three stories or not later than the middle of March. The plastering is now being put on and the first coat of paint.

Sperry & Tuckerman have the contract for a nest story and a half cottage for Elbert E. Martin to be built on the lot just south of the Presbyterian church. The plans are by Pease & Barber and the cost will be $2000.

WHO WILL BE SPEAKER?

REED, McKINLEY, CANNON, BURROWS OR HENDERSON?

The Peculiarities of the Ready Talkers—Reed McKinley and Henderson Described by One of the Fashion Correspondents—Habits of the Men.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Two men are walking through the Capitol grounds and toward the city, touching elbows in friendly fashion. They are men who attract considerable attention. It would not be easy to get two men aside by side who would lafford greater contrast. Reed and McKinley are not at all alike. Reed is big, round bellied, loose jointed, awk ward. He wears his derby hat pretty well back on his head. Both hands are buried in the overcoat pockets. His coat is not a snug or tidy fit. He has a peculiar gait, swinging his legs in a semi-circle at every step. His shoe is at least a No 10. He holds his head well up and appears to be oblivious of his surroundings. But watch him closely and you will perceive that out of his small, twinkling eyes alertness shines. There is nothing slow or stupid about the man, despite his awkwardness. Physically he is active, fond of exercise, given to long walks. Mentally he is full of adaptability, analysis, readiness. He is a little cranky in his ideas, but not overly. His small light mustache gilds his round face a boyish look. As he walks along he carries a good deal of snow from both of his feet and his body. If there should be a dog fight in this way you would expect him to stop and look at it. If he could count upon three or four men cleaning one man or a man maltreating a child or a dumb brute, you would expect him to interfere. You would not be disappointed.

Reed's [illegible] position is of a different cut. Speaker Reed is half a head, not so large of girth, carefully, but not carelessly, dressed. McKinley's figure is quite as striking. The observer would say Reed was a lawyer or a farmer, or a lumberman. He does not look like a statesman. McKinley does. You can tell he is a public man as far as you can see him. His trim figure, his shining silk hat (of which he is more than ever fond since he became a candidate for speaker), his smooth, round face with "finality" in it, all denote the man of dignity and importance. Neither Reed nor McKinley goes in society. Both attend their game in the house and their books. Both are students and hard workers. Neither has time for dinners or receptions. They are fast friends. For many a year have they worked side by side on the ways and means committee. Each is a sincere admirer of the other, and though now rivals for a great office, still preserve their friendly relationship to a marked degree. As they walk down the avenue people turn their heads and you frequently hear the remark: "There goes the next speaker of the house."

McKinley and Reed have entirely different methods on the floor. Reed is nearly always in his seat. He is usually one of the first men to reach the house in the morning. He rarely sits still. You can see him at almost all times moving about, not nervously, but with an obvious unrest born of his great energies. He likes always to be doing something. McKinley on the other hand is not much seen on the floor. He is generally in his committee room. When on the floor he is at his desk busied with some subject or in close conversation with friends.

Reed speaks often, McKinley rarely. Reed loves nothing better than a debate, a cross fire, a hand to hand struggle. Unlike almost all the other men who speak often, he is always listened to. When his piercing, pyramidal drawl is heard members recede from the cloak room, put aside their newspapers, stop conversation. Pressmen rush in from their waiting room. Everybody is eager to hear Reed. Nobody knows this better than Reed himself.

JULIUS CAESAR BURROWS.

Reed's tongue is a fine steel trap, or a piece of forked lightning. His repartee is [illegible] his sarcasm [illegible]. He has been called the humble bee of the house, because he hums so much, has so many stings. If he is taking the floor in the house he stands in the aisle near the speaker's desk and [illegible] to and, grasping a chair with either hand. If a democratic cross fire is going on between others, he smiles up and down, leans easily upon his desk, rests [illegible] and [illegible] watches things like a lynx. Who never opportunity offers he interjects remarks which cut to the quick. His [illegible] word fills the hall, commands [illegible] them, thus gained he speaks [illegible] ...ursed drawl that he has time to pare his sentences and choose his words. Often hours and days in his shots when least [illegible]. Sometimes he is sitting at [illegible] desk, apparently occupied with a newspaper or book. Nobody suspects he is paying any attention to what is going on. Like a flash he turns his head and with a dozen words hurls an interesting inquiry or a searching jab of sarcasm at the man who is making a speech. He has a habit of making these interjections without going through the form of addressing the speaker. He is chairmaker always hearing near the speaker's desk ready for a crack at any available target.

Reed is a genuine "down easter." His pronunciation is that of Joshua Whitcomb. He makes two syllables of such words as "door" and "floor." "Davis" he calls "Dovel," with a peculiar sort of twist which no letters can characterize and no man not New England born can imitate. It is somewhat like "Dovvul."

McKinley never jokes in rounding the cuspidors. He has no thing for cross fire. Usually when he speaks it is a "set" speech carefully prepared. He attracts universal attention. His voice is thin and wiry, like Reed's, but not so strong or full of inflections. He has no ability in filling the hall, however; and though not an orator is a man who commands respect for his earnestness and sincerity, for what he says rather than his manner of saying it. His sentences are compact, strong, plain. He likes to use short, common words. He rarely speaks on any other subject than the tariff, and his tariff speeches have probably had more wide-spread circulation than those of any other men on the Republican side.

McKinley is a manly, approachable, sincere man. Between his work in the house, his toil at his desk in the Elbert house, and his tender, almost touching devotion to his invalid wife, McKinley has no time for society or pleasure.

The square faced man with the solid well knit figure, sitting in his seat in the midst of the Republicans with his feet on the desk before him and a newspaper in his hand is another possible speaker. He is Julius Caesar Burrows. His tongue is almost as ready as Reed's, and his popularity as great as McKinley's. He likes debate, but is not so much given to promiscuous talking as his rival from Maine. He is one of the leaders of the house on the Republican side. In debate he is courteous and agreeable. His strong point is familiarity with the rules. He is a great parliamentarian. His eyes are as blue and [illegible] as a school girl's. His manners are hearty with his "intimates," dignified but courteous with strangers. Men whom he knows familiarly he slaps on the back or lays his arm on their shoulders. He is companionable and sincere. In his attire he is neat and modest, though he is said to be possessed of an idiosyncrasy in that he never has his shoes blacked. In his Prince Albert coat he wears the original button of the Loyal Legion.

CANNON AND HENDERSON.

The two men we see standing in familiar conversation in the corridor are also possible speakers of the house. One is Joseph G. Cannon, the other David B. Henderson. Both wear slouch hats both are Grand Army veterans. Cannon looks like a country deacon or justice of the peace, Henderson like a colonel in the regular army. Cannon is an ideal debater and one of the leaders of his side. He has unlimited good nature and can smile and shrug his shoulders while receiving a hard blow, and then smile and good while giving a harder one in return. He likes to be in the thickest of the fighting, and gives and takes like a man. His hair is thin, and he is beginning to show a bald spot on the poll of his head. He has his hands in his pockets a good deal, and wears a turn down collar. Sometimes a little dust shows on his hat, which is a cross between a military slouch and a granger lady. Indeed, Cannon is sometimes mistaken for a [illegible] by strangers, but he is one of the sharpest and brightest men in congress.

All of the speakership candidates are lawyers. All have served for a considerable time in the house. Reed has been here ten years, McKinley twelve, Burrows ten, Cannon sixteen and Henderson six. All but the last named were born in this country. Reed and McKinley are natives of the states which they now and in [illegible] Congress.

Cannon was born away down in North Carolina where he was reared a Quaker. Burrows is a native of Pennsylvania, and Henderson of Scotland. Cannon is the oldest, being 53; Reed is 50, Burrows 52; McKinley, 47, and Henderson, 44. All are men of exemplary habits. McKinley smokes and chews, but never drinks, not even at log dances. Reed drinks but sparingly, and his chief amusement is playing billiards. Cannon likes to tell stories and dance old fashioned [illegible]. Henderson is fond of [illegible] dinner speaking, while Burrows [illegible] make a stump speech than [illegible] of the best in each. One of these days I may say a good word about each of them.

WALTER WELLMAN.

Rudolf's First Love.

Springfield Republican.

It is an open secret that the first love affair of the late heir to the Austrian throne was with a beautiful young Italian singer Mlle. Emilia Tagliana. She was a pupil of my dear old Maestro Lamperti, and studied with him in the Milan conservatorio. After making quite a few Italian theatres Mlle Tagliana was engaged at the Ring theatre of ill fated memory; and it was while she was singing there that the crown prince saw, heard and fell in love with this little artiste. They were both very young and for a time no notice was taken of the youthful Romeo and Juliet, but finally Prince Rudolf declared his intention of espousing the [illegible] La Tagliana and then of course there was trouble. The lovers were at once separated. Mlle Tagliana being packed off to Italy and forbidden to set foot in Austria and the crown prince sent on a tour to the Orient guarded by tutors etc. On his return a bride was ready and [illegible] he was wedded to the blue eyed Princess Stephanie of Belgium.

La Tagliana in the meantime came down to Lake Como where she passed the summer with many others of Lamperti's pupils of whom I was one at the time. Her romance and her petite graceful figure, with great melting dark eyes and delicate features her air of melancholy and sweet pathetic voice, were all familiar enough to the students gathered there round the old maestro. We regarded her with admiring awe and, of course, sympathized splendidly with her lovelorn fate. After the prince was safely wedded, Mlle Tagliana went to sing at Berlin and finally drifted back again to Vienna. The gossip of that most gossiping city always has it that the prince remained faithful to "love's young dream," as far as he could be, and the fair Princess Stephanie was openly jealous of the dark eyed singer. I do not know what became of La Tagliana, as I never saw her again after that one summer on Lake Como.

THE MORMON STATE.

They Have Prospered Forty Years at Expanding It.

[Special Correspondence.]

COMMERCE, Utah, Jan. 30.—The snows of December have been at it a long time, and as far as the expectant Gentile eye can see they are no nearer to securing their state government than at their first dash in 1849. Come to think, it isn't quite forty years, but it will be when the Fifty-first congress meets in regular session and rejects their petition, as it surely will.

LORD CHURCHILL

THE BRILLIANT CAREER OF THE YOUNG PARLIAMENTARIAN

Mr. O'Connor Power, Who Was Elected to the House of Commons by [illegible] with Young Churchill in 1874, Describes [illegible] of His Tactics.

[Special Correspondence.]

LONDON, Feb. 8.—It was in the year 1875 that I first encountered Lord Randolph Churchill. Before he had been elected to parliament, for the last time, the year before, and it was my fate to make in the house of commons the acquaintance of the then Duke of Marlborough who brought Lord Randolph to his feet the most [illegible] remarkable of all the Irish political prisoners of that day, and no sense of them were ever who had joined the Irish Revolutionary brotherhood while in the British army and in the pay and service of the queen. It was very difficult to induce the house to take a lenient view of their case. To strengthen my argument on that favor I cited the case of Churchill the first Duke of Marlborough without incurring for that offense the severest censure if necessary. He had resigned his oath of allegiance to King James within twenty-four hours of the time that he had in the camp of William and the latter, I ventured to point out, did not hesitate to adopt his services, but, on the contrary, conferred high honors upon him, though he was a soldier who had broken his oath.

LORD CHURCHILL.

Lord Randolph—of whose subsequent career, I am sorry to say, I was not then aware—was sitting opposite to me while I made this speech. When I sat down several members rose and to my surprise there was a general shout of "Churchill! Churchill!" I wondered for a moment whether the ghost of the great soldier had appeared to reprove me for uncharitableness, and I felt that he might be in full view of the house, though invisible to me, when I heard the speaker call out the name of Lord Randolph Churchill and saw a young man on an opposite bench rise at his entrance and bear himself up to an erect and attitude. Before, he said, to express in respect of the great [illegible] which [illegible] had been conferred on his ancestor. The Lords refused to vote due not to his ancestor's [illegible] of the king and attachment to [illegible] but to the victories he had won on the battle field. The house cheered and Lord Randolph was happy for the whole of that evening. The London papers next morning did not quite sustain his historical [illegible], but he [illegible] the incident for the purpose of contrasting the Lord Randolph Churchill of that day with the Lord Randolph Churchill of this.

His [illegible] then was feeble, hesitating and uncertain. No one could discern the existence of [illegible] which he has since developed to a degree which places him, the half dozen ablest men in parliament. Take him all round he has now no superior in that quarrelsome which ought to distinguish a first class leader of parliament, excepting Mr. Gladstone, who stands so far above all his colleagues and opponents that comparison with him is out of the question. He is full of resource, and cultivates the forty seams of the fine arts of party warfare. He has one ever present object in view, and that is, he always goes for big game, no wasting of powder and shot on the inferior animals. In this respect he [illegible] as it is said, have been adopted from the earlier practice of Disraeli, and as the latter first gained a reputation by assailing Sir Robert Peel, Lord Randolph first distinguished himself by his assault on Mr. Gladstone, when he has variously associated with Mr. Forster, Parnell and I know not how many other more inactive characters. During the past session he [illegible] in 1874, when last of all but Lord Randolph made his debut in the house and was silent for most of the session. But not long after the meeting of the new parliament in the latter part of last January he began to [illegible] as his ability was fully recognized by both parties. Early in February of last year he [illegible] Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, Sir John Gorst, [illegible] Stafford North Cote, [illegible] Sir Stafford Northcote, [illegible] contempt on Mr. W. H. Smith, [illegible] and rose, when in recognition of [illegible] "Randolph Churchill for that ilk" with the Lord Randolph Churchill of this.
